Becoming Indigo Tara Taylor, Lorna Schultz Nicholson

“Once you open up your heart, you are going to figure out what you are supposed to do.”

High school is finally over, and Indigo Russell is living with two of her best friends in the Glebe, a hip, eclectic neighborhood in downtown Ottawa. It’s summertime, which means longer days filled with music, parties, boys—and even later nights. When the apartment starts making strange noises, Indie wonders: is it just her imagination, or is something more sinister at play?

Meanwhile, she has no idea what she wants to do with her life. As close friends and classmates prepare to head off to university, she’s left wondering where to go—a task made all the more difficult because her thoughts are interrupted by weird voices. Who are these voices that keep talking to her? Angels or villains? Is the apartment haunted . . . or is she?

As she searches for answers and attempts to control her supernatural abilities, Indie forms a close bond with Paul, literally the nicest guy ever. Not long after, Indie’s first love, John, comes back into her life, complicating everything. Fate leads her to Annabelle, a woman who shares her psychic gift and teaches her to use tarot and oracle cards—and who may be the one to help her figure it all out.

In the face of danger and heartache, Indie must learn to follow her intuition, listen to her inner guide, and discover who she should trust so she can become the person she is meant to be.
