Anna Freud (1895-1982) was Sigmund Freud's youngest daughter and one of the founding figures of child psychoanalysis. I Will Never Leave You is about the relationships that mattered to her most: the relationship with her father and with her lifelong partner Dorothy Tiffany Burlingham, as well as the relationship she had with herself. The play paints a picture of her life but also asks questions about the nature of the things that we call life and self.

I Will Never Leave You is a play about gender, sexuality, female masculinity and asceticism, about whether there is a bottom line or a core to being, and if so what does it consist of. It's a play about the self and its relation to time, place, language and the other, and about a fundamental experience of being but a guest in this world. The play also looks at family archetypes and allows the spectator to reflect on his or her own family background and psychological foundations through it.
