Love conquers all, right? If only it were that easy.

When the Manchester-based Monsoon Dance Theatre starts gearing up for its ambitious Frankenstein premiere, the women in Will's life – his malevolent, but sexy boss; the innocent part-time assistant who considers “Christ” to be more than just a curse word; the dead ex-girlfriend who haunts him; and a crazy-haired Scottish girl that only exists in his dreams – start competing for his affections. It quickly descends into an all-out war of biblical proportions, but whose side is he on? Faced with the options of empty sex or another doomed relationship, is victory even possible?

Addicted to love, yet consumed by self-hatred, Will must travel across multiple levels of reality through to the edge of sanity, confront his past, wage an undercover war, and somehow try to make it through the vicious daily grind of office life.

In a dirty war of secrets and lies, sex and truth become devastating weapons. Day-by-day, the Frankenstein premiere approaches, and tensions escalate. With careers on the line, and personal conflicts raging amidst professional lives, only one thing seems certain: on the battlefield of love, there will be casualties.

Inspired by dreams, nightmares, rock 'n' roll, classic horror, and the Bible, this is no saccharine, schmaltzy, run-of-the-mill romance novel. The marriage of love and loneliness is a toxic relationship, and the outcome is never pretty.

Contain strong languages, scenes of graphic sex, and copious amounts of psychological torture. Brace yourself.
