Children LOVE learning about animals. Especially animal babies! Within the pages of this next ebook, by Kim Flewelling, readers young and the young at heart will travel along the pages and learn about young animals and their quite humorous names before they are all grown up! Meant to share with a special child at bedtime at home or when visiting family or added to a book collection during early literacy instruction in school.

Education Tip: Build new vocabulary skills. Explore with English Language Learners within individual, small group, or whole class instruction and integrate into curriculum and instruction for literacy (reading, writing) and science. Introduce into the Pre-K through Grade 2 curriculum wherever technology is available with ebook readers! Standards for reading and comprehension will help the reader and the teacher. Emergent and early words are embedded within the text for young readers and learners of English, as well as for bilingual populations. Look for challenge words too! Early and later developing speech sound combinations can be practiced during speech language therapy across settings: classroom inclusion, pull-out, private practice, and tutoring.

What kind of baby animal is an ephra or a cria?! How about a spat or a pinkie!

Children with special needs and learning differences will benefit from the layout of this adorable, educational e-book! Enjoy! Explore! Love Learning!
