Finally! A book for those who need practical down to earth help in planning an authentic and meaningful classroom program based on sound science and experience for a student with autism. Written from the perspective of a mother and teacher, this book aims to make the language of Applied Behaviour Analysis easy to understand and to implement in the classroom.

Complementing Been There. Done That, this book explains how and why the principles of applied behaviour analysis make sense for students with autism. It encourages, empowers and inspires readers to develop methods and attitudes that help students reach their potential.

The book includes:

A comprehensive account of what autism might look like in the classroom and practical strategies about how we can teach to these core deficits using ABA principles

A personal account of the perspective of a teacher and a mother in educating a student with autism

Help with possible accommodations, modifications, goals and objectives

A whole section that is devoted to creating "ABA style" Individual Education Plans and transition plans

Examples of IEPs written with ABA language and methods

Sample forms for data collection and skill tracking

A book that will inspire, empower and affirm what you do to reach children with autism.
