Faithful Witness: A Sesquicentennial History of Central Avenue Christian Reformed Church, Holland, Michigan, 1865-2015 Robert P. Swierenga

The year 2015 marks the sesquicentennial of Central Avenue church, the first Christian Reformed Church in Holland, Michigan. The congregation was founded in 1865 and for 150 years has held its place proudly in the heart of the city facing Centennial Park, originally Market Square. A daughter of the Graafschap "country church," one of the four seminal churches in West Michigan of the new denomination, Central Avenue quickly outgrew its mother, reaching 1,830 souls by 1910, making it the largest congregation in the Holland area. After giving birth to a half-dozen daughter churches, many on the suburban fringes of the city, membership at the mother church waned, but today in her 150th year, by God's grace, she is growing and thriving again. Known as the "Dutch church" - the afternoon Dutch service continued to 1955 - Central Avenue cherished its reputation as a traditional, conservative congregation. Broadcasts of its worship services since 1946 have ministered to thousands. Faithful members give sacrificially for Christian schooling and missions. The majestic brick building with its towering spire, dedicated in 1953, is noted for its outstanding acoustics. By the grace of God, the congregation will service the church of Christ and the Holland community until the Lord returns in the clouds.
